Meetings, Meetings, and More Meetings

This last week there were several meetings of potential interest, all of which will have more discussion to follow.. The first was the well-attended WUI conversation about upcoming fire prevention strategies, then the the Public Officials Training Meeting, a regular Planning Commission Meeting, a Messaging Initiative Meeting, and a Special Town Council Meeting (Special means additional because nothing really special about it. See below for the brief recap of pretty standard approvals. It is commendable that TC and staff convened this additional meeting—one that could likely have been deferred to a regular session—but doing so undoubtedly provided more timely decisions for those awaiting approvals for some upcoming events.)

Wildland Urban Interface

The purpose of this summary is to give you access to more information rather than to deluge you with that information.

Working together with the Hurricane Valley Fire Protection District, the Town held a Wildland Fire community information meeting this past Tuesday. Nearly 50 residents were in attendance to learn about upcoming updates to wildland fire mitigation requirements mandated by State law.

Materials from the presentation are now available on the Town's website. It is in the best interest of each of us to review the information so we can better understand the forthcoming changes to wildland fire policies that may affect our Springdale properties and our pocketbooks. The final slide includes several useful resource links for further review.

You can access the presentation here:
https://www.springdaletown.com/583/Wildland-Urban-Interface

Properties in critical areas will be assessed a fee, as money motivates. The desired outcome is to prevent a woodland fire from burning your home.

As mentioned during the session, Dave Harmon, Wildland Fire Battalion Chief with Hurricane Valley Fire, is available to discuss wildfire risk and mitigation questions related to your specific property. He can be reached directly at dharmon@hvfssd.org.

Thank you for staying informed and/or becoming informed and engaged!

Thank you to those who organized and presented this helpful evening and the now readily available information.

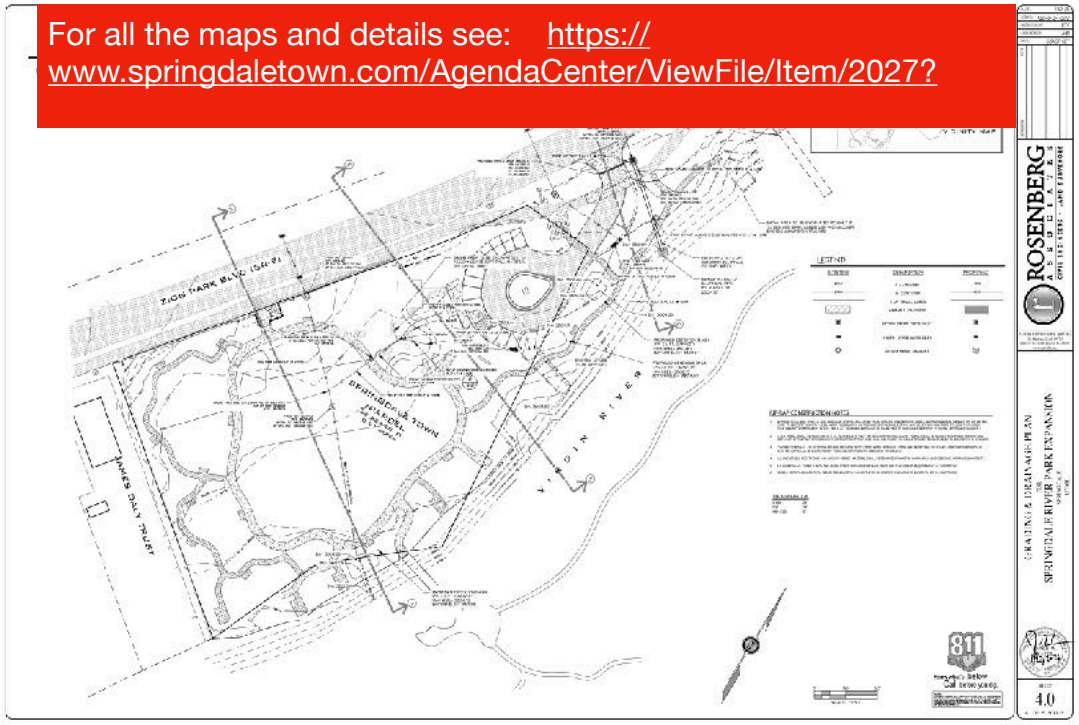

Planning Commission Meeting Recap

by Jim Cutler

The Springdale's town staff sought the Planning Commission's approval of plans, created by Assist Architects, to expand the George A Barker River Park by incorporating Parcel S-150-D.
In reviewing the design, the commission found that
1) the park is zoned valley residential; not public use.
2) the design only indicated outdoor lighting next to the restroom.
3) the staff did not include a water-wise irrigation plan for the lawns, trees, and shrubbery.
4) most of the 15-stall parking is within the 100-year flood zone. Given the parking area was created years earlier, under a different set of ordinances, the parking lot is technically "legal," but non-compliant.

For all the maps and details see: https://www.springdaletown.com/AgendaCenter/ViewFile/Item/2027?

The Commission approved the expansion plans on conditions that 1) they did not include a pavilion, a river-viewing platform and a new restroom (the current restroom will be upgraded), and 2) that irrigation will follow the landscape zone ordinances for valley residential.

The staff also presented the Planning Commission with an erosion study which needed evaluation and approval. Because most of the improvements to the George A Barker River Park will occur in an erosion hazard zone, Rosenberg Associates were hired to assess the need for erosion mitigation. Their study did not find any increased risk of erosion based upon the currently approved upgrades to the park.

The Commission approved the assessment of Rosenberg Associates with the understanding that 1) the assessment did not include the construction of pavilion, river-viewing platform and/or new restroom, and 2) that the guidance and warnings found in sections 4.2 through 4.5 of the Rosenberg and Associates report be heeded.

Public Officials Training-Not as Boring as it Sounds

editorial by E Cutler

Last Wednesday, (Feb 18) there was a Public Official's Training. Though designed for Public Officials, like town council members, it was available to everyone. I found it most informative and interesting, which came as a bit of a surprise as I expected to have to keep smacking my face to stay awake. This article will point out what stood out to me.

Darin Bushman, Director of Services Offered At Five County Association Of Governments (FCAOG), discussed what those services include which were very impressive and actually gave me a sense of, well, something akin to patriotism. I was able to refer the information to a friend. I know, as a society, we mess up a lot but caring for the less fortunate is absolutely a characteristic most of us share and value, even if not always done well. Listening to resources available, I was almost weepy.

Amongst the agenda items were discussions of how to handle potential conflicts, instruction on how to make a motion (not as easy as you might think), stressing the importance of having a designated records officer, and reminding all about the necessity of advance notice for public hearings. I am pleased to report our leaders in Springdale excel in all of these, and other, areas. Applause and appreciation to them.

Now this was fascinating: "No action can be taken in a closed meeting." Yes, votes and final decisions are all "actions." Situations where this did not occur in Springdale include hiring Tom Dansie as Town Manager, voting to take the parcel next to town hall under threat of condemnation, and a host of others. Making no comment about the quality of those decisions (yay, Tom), the appropriate method was not followed. I expect it will be from now on as all the members of council, much of commission, and many town staff members were all present at the same meeting. My impression is they are trying to be rock stars when it comes to following the letter of the protocol laws, as it were.

A LITTLE BIT MORE:

Mr. Carter brought up the topic of the two styles of leadership. One where elected representatives feel it their duty to generally follow the will of those whom they represent. The other is for them to say, "I was elected to make the decisions so I will do so." The Springdale Sun has written about this before. It seems clear that neither method is appropriate to rigidly follow all the time. Choosing either way exclusively is simplification bordering on bad governance. The more local the government, the more citizens should have the final say. Several problems with that including how does one ascertain what the majority want? Even if the majority always get their way, someone won't be happy. As a local governing body, knowing when to follow (and whom to follow) vs when to lead, well, it's not easy.

This article wraps up where Mr. Carter wrapped up. To council and commission members he said, "BE BOLD." That can take the form of making unpopular decisions. It can also take the form of making needed changes. He concluded the "be bold" directive with how vital public trust was, thus his final and most important admonition was, "Whatever you can do to get Public Trust, DO IT."

Saving the Best (Meeting) for Last

by E Cutler

Ever gone on vacation and assumed everyone in the restaurants, gifts shops, etc., were trying to put the financial screws to you? I used to — until my parents moved to Springdale in the early 90's. As they got to know the Laura Doty's and the Shelley Coxes, the Smiths and the Youngs, I came to know them, as well, although vicariously at that time. I realized people working in "tourists towns" are just that — people. People trying to make a living in a home town others want to visit.

I wish there had been some information given in those towns I visited while going to Mount Rushmore or Williamsburg, Virginia, et al. Maybe a sign like, "your vacation, our town." Or a little placard in a hotel room describing the town and what it has to offer outside of its Mt Rushmore. I would have been a lot less judgmental and a lot more willing to buy stuff, I must say.

Last Thursday, the Springdale Messaging Initiative group held a meeting to tell us that, basically, that's what they are about. They are working on ways to communicate to tourists the "human-ness" of those who live and work in Springdale full time. This would naturally evolve into greater respect shown to townies by visitors.

It was a well-run meeting with a lot of ideas they had already come up with and a request for input from all of us. They encouraged us to tell them what we liked about what they had already come up with or come up with ideas of our own to replace or enhance what they had done. We should all take the time to answer their questionnaire.

I was so impressed by everything and so excited to help in anyway I can. I know I cannot do better than what they've done in coming up with ideas. This could be downright life enhancing, for those who host (about 600 of us), as well as those who come to be hosted (about 5 million per annum).

Rather than trying to repeat everything they said, please check out their presentation available online. Look at all the information found here:

<https://www.springdaletown.com/584/Messaging-Initiative>

Take the survey. Be a part of the communication improvement. How do you think we can most effectively communicate with our 5 million visitors to let them know we are not a tourist town as much as a town who welcomes tourists? What exactly should we be communicating to enhance mutual respect?

We want to be the kind of hosts which make visitors want to come back again and again. We want tourists to be the kind of visitors we would enjoy welcoming back again and again. This Messaging Initiative is a giant step in that direction.

Check it out.

Learning about Happiness Hormones, Part II

by Debi Keys

Welcome to Part 2 of our Happiness Hormone series — Dopamine, the brain's reward chemical.

Dopamine motivates us to chase goals, seek pleasure, and move forward in life. It's what drives us to check off to-do lists, pursue meaningful relationships, and feel accomplished when we succeed. The motivation lies in the reward. Completing tasks releases dopamine, activating the brain's reward system and inspiring us to keep going.

While dopamine sometimes gets a bad reputation due to its role in addictive behaviors, healthy dopamine habits—like movement, nourishing food, and intentional self-care—actually remodel the brain's reward system in a positive way. These habits increase receptor availability, reduce anxiety and depression, and expand our capacity for joy.

🌟 Ways to Naturally Boost Dopamine

- Celebrate achievements, big or small
- Organize your space for clarity and focus
- Read a book that stimulates your mind
- Practice intentional self-care
- Listen to music that lifts your mood
- Eat nourishing, protein-rich foods
- Prioritize quality sleep
- Move your body — gym, sauna, or a walk
- Hydrate daily to support brain function

💬 Closing Thought:

"Small wins create big momentum."

Up next: Serotonin — the mood stabilizer and emotional balancer.

Find something that motivates you today,

Debs~ 💚

A Planetary Parade when Six Planets Align:

Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Mercury, Uranus, Neptune

Here's when and how you can see the six-planet alignment (planetary parade) on Saturday, February 28, 2026, from Springdale, Utah (Northern Hemisphere location) — based on astronomical predictions for this event:

When to watch

- Date: Saturday, Feb 28, 2026 (this is the peak date when the planets look closest together).
- Best time: About 30 – 60 minutes after local sunset. In Springdale the Sun sets around ~6 PM MST that day, so plan for ~6:15 PM – 7:30 PM local time.
- Viewing window: Although Feb 28 is the best date, you can often spot some planets for a few days before/after — but the tightest grouping is on the 28th.

Where in the sky to look

- Right after sunset: face west/ southwest for the best view of the alignment near the horizon.

Tips to improve your view

- Clear western horizon: Find a spot with an unobstructed view toward the west/ southwest — hills, trees, or buildings can block the low planets.
- Binoculars/telescope: Bring binoculars (and a telescope if you have one) to help catch Uranus and Neptune.
- Light pollution: A darker spot helps with seeing fainter planets — Springdale's skies are generally good if you move just outside town lights.
- Sky apps: Tools like Star Walk, Stellarium, or SkyView can overlay names and help you find each planet in real time.

Extra note

There will also be a bright Moon nearby in the evening sky, which can make the faint planets even harder to see.

For a wee bit of fun this St. Patrick's Day, join us in Springdale, the gateway to Zion National Park!
